

The National Press Building (aka National Press Club) was conceived in 1925 and constructed throughout 1926 and early 1927. The building, which was designed by George Rapp and Company, Chicago, was dedicated on February 4, 1928 and tenants soon began moving.

From Reliable Sources: The National Press Club in the American Century